D2: Perspective-Taking Video: Assessment Rubric

This rubric is shared with you so you know exactly what we're looking for. Your tutor uses the same rubric to assess your video.

How assessment works

Your video is assessed on four dimensions. Each is rated:

- Fix and Resubmit: revision needed
- Meets Distinction Standard: passes
- Exceeds: notably strong

To pass D2: "Meets" or "Exceeds" on all four dimensions. One "Fix and Resubmit" = resubmit.

The four dimensions

1. Steel-Manning

Are you arguing the strongest version of the assigned position?

Fix and Resubmit	Meets Distinction Standard	Exceeds
Signals personal disagreement ("I was assigned to argue this, but…"). Presents a weak version of the position that's easy to dismiss.	Argues as if they genuinely hold this position. Presents the case a real advocate would make. No hedging or distancing.	Indistinguishable from a genuine advocate. The argument is compelling enough that someone who holds this view would say "yes, exactly."

The test: Could someone who genuinely holds this position watch your video and say "that's what I believe and why"? If yes, you've steel-manned.

2. Evidence

Are you grounding your argument in specific course content?

Fix and Resubmit	Meets Distinction Standard	Exceeds
Vague references ("AI can be biased", "we learned about fairness") with no specific algorithms, metrics, or case studies named.	Names 2+ specific course concepts with concrete detail: an algorithm, a metric value, a case study, a result from a task you completed.	3+ references with concrete detail (numbers, names, dates). Evidence is woven into the argument, not just listed. Each point is grounded in something specific.

What "specific" means: "COMPAS had different error rates" is vague. "COMPAS had a 45% false positive rate for Black defendants compared to 23% for white defendants" is specific. Name the system, the metric, the number.

3. Counterargument Engagement

Do you engage with the strongest objection to your position?

Fix and Resubmit	Meets Distinction Standard	Exceeds
Ignores counterarguments entirely. OR picks an obviously weak objection and dismisses it ("some people say AI is bad, but they're wrong").	Names the strongest objection. Acknowledges what it gets right. Responds substantively: explains why your position holds despite the challenge.	Response shows genuine wrestling with the objection, not a rehearsed dismissal: e.g., engaging a specific counterargument raised in a class Kialo debate, where one ran, named precisely rather than "someone said…".

The acknowledge-pivot-respond pattern: "The strongest objection is X. This is a fair point because Y. However, my position holds because Z." If your counterargument section skips the "this is a fair point" step, it's likely "Fix and Resubmit."

4. Delivery

Is your presentation clear, structured, and within time?

Fix and Resubmit	Meets Distinction Standard	Exceeds
Reading verbatim from a script. OR rambling with no clear structure. OR significantly outside 3–5 minutes (under 2:30 or over 6:00).	Clear structure (opening → points → counterargument → closing). Speaking from notes, not reading. Within 3–5 minutes. Audio is clear.	Confident, natural delivery. Feels like someone arguing a case in a meeting. Pacing is deliberate. Transitions between points are smooth.

Note: We don't penalise low video quality (phone camera is fine). We DO penalise inaudible audio: if we can't hear you, we can't assess you.

Quick self-check before submitting

Dimension	Minimum for "Meets"
Steel-manning	No hedging, no "I was assigned to…"
Evidence	2+ named course concepts with concrete detail

Dimension	Minimum for “Meets”
Counterargument	Strongest objection named, acknowledged, responded to
Delivery	Clear structure, not reading, 3–5 minutes
